Notice of Foreclosure.

Whereas, Albert M. Spaulding of Bangor, on the 18th day of January, 1873, mortgaged to us the following described real estate, viz:

A certain parcel of land situate in said Bangor and described thus: Beginning at a point on Union Street, to have the same by line of Street, owned by the city in towards the same, thence running with 45 degrees one hundred and fifty-six feet to the line of land formerly of Ira Stage, thence nearly at right angles ninety feet and nine inches to a point, thence again 45 degrees west at right angles to the line of said Union Street, and fifty-six feet to the line of Lincoln street, thence westerly at right angles on the line of said street ninety feet and nine inches to the first bounding, with all the buildings on said premises, being all and the same conveyed to said Spaulding by deed of Ira Stage, by deed dated Jan. 1, 1872, and recorded in volume 300, page 456, of the Penobscot Registry of Deeds.

And whereas the conditions of said mortgage have been broken, I now claim a foreclosure thereof, and publish this notice accordingly.

JULIUS H. SPAULDING,
FRED T. HALL.

FURTHER OPINIONS OF BEECHER'S STATEMENT

Our readers who have been interested in the developments of the remarkable investigation of scandalous charges preferred by Theodore Tilton against the distinguished pastor of Plymouth church, will also feel an interest in the expression of public sentiment in other communities with reference to Mr. Beecher's powerful vindication. We therefore copy the following editorial extracts from some of the principal journals of Boston and New York which have come to hand:

[From the Boston Journal]

It is with a feeling of satisfaction the deepest expression is that we place on record this frank, manly and exhaustive defence of the Plymouth pastor, and point to it as a complete answer to the cruel charges which have been brought against him. Every line in it bears the impress of truthfulness, and it is impossible for any candid person—nay, we believe it will be impossible even for any prejudiced person—to read it without forming the conclusion that it embodies what we said for the other day, the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. These, we repeat, are the facts clearly established by Mr Beecher's statement. They constitute a complete vindication of the purity of his character and the rectitude of his purpose; and revealing, as they do, at some measure the weight of the burden he has so long carried, and the depth of anguish he has suffered, they can hardly fail of quickening the public affection and regard for him.

[From the Boston Globe

The world has sufficient ground on which to judge as between Beecher and Tilton. The pastor of Plymouth Church is vindicated, and still stands all the higher in the world's esteem for the persecution and suffering which he has borne so long in silence, in the hope of preventing revelations which would injure others far more than himself while Theodore Tilton should receive the reprobation due to a heartless and cruel husband, a false friend and a perjured defamer. The greatest mercy to the cause he is to be left in the obscurity of a social outcast.

[From the Boston Advertiser]

Mr Beecher waited long for his hour of triumph but it has come at last. No fair-minded person, it seems to us, can read his long and most pathetic statement without a clear conviction of his innocence. * * * Taking the case as it stands now, Tilton's circumstantial charges and specifications on one side, Beecher's full, explicit, comprehensive explanation and denial on the other—and there does not seem to be room for a reasonable doubt that Mr Beecher has been the victim of a most cruel conspiracy, working against him in many ways and from a variety of motives, but since the moment of its birth intending his destruction. * * * He has met the conspiracy at last in the only way open to a man of truth and honor. The manner and the substance of his defence must command universal respect and sympathy.

[From the Boston Post

It is with profound regret that this answer of Mr Beecher will be pronounced insufficient and unsatisfactory however deep an impression it may make otherwise. Public judgment will not be finally clouded or warped, for it is fully capable of disposing of matters as grave as can be proposed to it. Time must be entrusted with the clearing up of what still is left an anxious, agonizing doubt.

[From the N Y World]

He has spoken out like a man to men, and he deserves, as we have not the least doubt he will receive, a manly judgment at the hands of his fellow-countrymen. As for the wretches who have preyed upon him, it is as unnecessary to dwell upon their monstrous crime against society as it is difficult to see how that crime can be adequately punished.

[From the N. Y Tribune]

The blackmail feature is the really destructive matter. It scarcely helps Mr Beecher, but it falls like the lightning upon his assailants. It shows Mr. Tilton's attitude in the business to nothing less than that of infamy. To Mr. Moulton it is destruction. Mr Carpenter only escapes on the ground that he knew no better. Unless they can promptly break the force of this revelation, or disprove, Mr Beecher's explicit (and, in the cross-examination, detailed) statement, the whole pack of his pursuers are placed by it beside Woodhull, and need occupy the thoughts of decent men or women no more forever.

[From the N Y Evening Post]

This is a sad and humiliating statement, and in any aspect, humiliating especially in that it discloses, by his own confession, a disgraceful fear of the opinion of men on the part of a great preacher who spoke so often and so eloquently taught us that a clear conscience need fear neither man nor God.

We grieve to say also that, considering the manner in which it is given to the public, without the light of any of the collateral testimony which has been taken by the committee, without a full statement and examination of Mr. Moulton, and without even a full report of the questions put to Mr. Beecher by members of the Committee and his replies—it is an unsatisfactory statement.

[From the N. Y Express.]

If public opinion, as we see it and read it among decent people, means anything, it is the acquittal of Mr. Beecher of all wrong done or intended toward Mrs. Tilton. The whole thing has been a conspiracy, and a very base one, and a conspiracy so well designed, continued and consummated as to entrap a too credulous man.

[From the N. Y. Sun]

If Mr. Beecher can be crushed by Mr. and Mrs. Tilton and F. D. Moulton, there may not any clergyman in this country be ruined by one bad man and one weak or wicked woman, with one cunning and unscrupulous ally, perfectly innocent though he be?

[From the N. Y Evening Mail.]

We cannot conceive it possible that any unprejudiced, right-minded and large-hearted man can read this careful, frank, methodical and exhaustive review of the circumstances, accusations, hostile testimony and garbled letters that have been artfully connected to effect Mr. Beecher's ruin, without feeling the keenest sympathy for the sufferings he has endured, and the fearless admiration for the heroic front he presents to the world and his accusers, and for the vigor of the blows with which he breaks one after another of the links that had been forged to bind him while the baser birds of prey inserted their foul beaks into his heart.

[From the Brooklyn Eagle]

In our opinion it does not now make any difference what Moulton says or testifies. To say now that Mr Beecher did not admit adultery to him is to confess that he was a party to the plunder of a clergyman by imposing on his weaknesses. In asserting that Mr. Beecher did not make such a confession, Mr. Moulton must confess that he is a man who believes that his "friend" can forgive his wife's adultery, providing the man who is a partner in the crime pays roundly as an extenuation of the offence. In either case Frank Moulton has no standing in a court of justice, or before that wider tribunal in which the issue is decided by the common test of ordinary manhood.

The Portland Press on Saturday interviewed two notorious visitors, Daniel Pratt and F D. Moulton. The Great American Traveller was communicative, but the "mutual friend" was meditative and disinclined to converse. Mr. Moulton went to Gloucester, Mass., and spent the Sabbath with his legal friend, Gen. Butler. He returned Monday. Last year, with a party of prominent Portlanders, he went to sea on a sword fishing trip, and will repeat the excursion during the present week, "if," as the Press curtly suggests, "the other members of the party will consent to associate with him since the recent revelations as to his character." The Press says: "The opinion entertained by several parties with whom he had conversation here is, that both he and Tilton are somewhat astonished that Beecher after all remembers so much and gives so many facts in so strong and conclusive a manner."

MOULTON'S RESERVED STATEMENT. Mr. Beecher's friends are said to expect that Moulton will soon publish his long statement withheld from the committee. It is said to consist mainly of letters, the chief reliance being a letter in Mrs Tilton's writing melting Beecher to a secret meeting. This letter is believed to have been dictated by Tilton Moulton has also a number of undated letters from Beecher, some of them in reply to invitations, and Moulton is said to have joined one of these to Mrs. Tilton's letter, so as to give a false impression of the relation of the two. As Butler is advising him it is supposed that the documents will be put in the worst possible shape, and in view of Beecher's exposure of blackmailing it is believed that Moulton will assert that adultery was confessed to him. Mr Beecher's friends feel confident of meeting and refuting any statements which he may make.

The Brooklyn Union reports that the members of the N. Y. Produce Exchange, where Moulton represented his firm of Woodruff & Robinson, are intensely disgusted at his course, and that it was intimated that he would be hustled from the building if he should appear there. The Eagle prints a statement by Rev S. B. Halliday, assistant pastor of Plymouth Church, in which he says that Nov 16, 1873, Theodore Tilton visited him at Moulton's request, and in the most explicit and emphatic language denounced as false the Woodhull scandal then circulating; and asserted his wife's purity with the utmost vehemence. At Tilton's request he afterwards visited Moulton, who made a similar declaration, maintaining Beecher perfectly innocent and pure and denouncing the Woodhull scandal. Mr. Halliday says—"In the entire interview with Mr. Moulton his manner was as decided as any man with whom I ever spoke; and when he uttered the words, 'I know Mr. Beecher is guiltless,' he brought his hand down with great violence on the table by which he was sitting."

The Milw Sentinel has also found the "brass nest" discovered by the Belfast Journal, and is trumpeting about Senator Morton as an advocate of reciprocity. As the Journal found it more convenient to let off a vulgar squib than to acknowledge its clumsy mistake, it has led its Augusta ally into the same bog. Truly, the Democratic papers are growing reliable—after a fashion of their own.

A member of one of the leading dry goods houses in Portland informs the Press that an extent demand during the fall in that line is almost assured by unusually early orders from various parts of the State.

Fortunate is he who, amid the world's temptations, keeps his honor lustrous and unspotted; wretched is he who, in the battle of life, finds that some evil blow has struck from his brow the emblem of his kingliness, despicable is he who, with deliberate purpose, uplifts his own hand to discrown his own head.—[Theodore Tilton, 1868.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

The Petersburg (Va.) Index says—"We assert without the fear of successful contradiction that there is no more any party of Conservative white men in the South in favor of electing Grant to the Presidency for a third term than there is any party of the same material in favor of electing Butler for the first."

There is no possibility of uniting the Democracy on the money question. The party in Maine and in Illinois is in favor of hard money and the redemption of the United States bonds in gold; the party in Ohio and Indiana is in favor of more paper money and the redemption of the United States bonds in greenbacks. The difference between these two positions is a matter of several hundred million dollars, and there is no present prospect of settling it.—[St. Louis Republican (Iod.)

Until the rights of the race it enfranchised are secured by what the late Senator Sumner would call irreversible guarantees, Republicans cannot safely relinquish that attachment to the party or unite with those who think as they do concerning other issues, in any way that bodes peril to the cause for the triumph of which they are peculiarly responsible. The whole record of the Democratic party is a warning that the rights of the colored race would be endangered by its supremacy.—[Boston Advertiser.

Congressman Phelps of New Jersey, in his speech accepting his nomination, drew a pathetic picture of the hardships endured, in a time of disaster, by the representative of 25,000 voters in an industrial district, when he was expected to furnish work for all "in Navy Yard, Custom House and Post Office;" when few died and none resigned in the Custom House, and "every mail-bag is already divided between a one-armed soldier and a one-legged sailor."

The Democracy of Pike county, Illinois, in Convention assembled, have given a formal indorsement to the bolting, rag money, white man's Jeffersonian party.

It is stated that forty Democrats of Norristown, Pa., have been enrolled to vote at the next Republican primaries, having engaged to vote the Republican ticket this fall.

AN AFFLICTED COUNTY. The people of Emmet county, Iowa, held a public meeting at Estherville, June 19th and appointed a committee to investigate the damage done by the locusts in the county. The committee has reported, and give a terrible picture of the ravages of the pests. The locusts first appeared in the spring of 1873, and the fields, which were well cultivated and under large crops, were soon almost totally devoid of vegetation, causing such distress that the Legislature was obliged to pass measures of relief. The case this year has been even worse. The insects had deposited their eggs in the soil, and last spring with the starting of vegetation the locusts in greater swarms than before rose from the ground and destroyed everything. In the whole county, comprising twelve Congressional townships, the total crop will not amount to more than 50 acres of poor wheat, 100 of potatoes and other crops in proportion. The people are obliged to meet the alternative of starving to death or abandoning their homes. Their only hope is that they may by the generosity of the people at large be enabled to tide over their difficulties until another season. They regard it as as improbable that the locusts will afflict them again at present, as they had never been known to visit that region before, and this season have deposited no eggs. The report, signed by the members of the committee, is published in several of the leading Western papers.

NOTICE!

The public are respectfully invited to call and examine the stock of BUZZELL & SHAW, where they can buy BETTER BOOTS AND SHOES for their money than at any other Store in the city. Their goods are made expressly for them, and they spare no pains in getting the very best sort in the market. They do not keep factory and job lott that are only half made, and of the poorest stock, but take pride and pleasure in selling their customers Boots and Shoes that are honestly and solidly made of the best material, and prefer rather to hold their trade by so doing, than to drive it away by selling trash. They warrant their goods to be just what they represent them, and their prices as low as the lowest. They are sole Agents in this city for the celebrated BRISTOL work, for Ladies and Misses. These Boots are made on the McGomber last, and are acknowledged to be superior in style, fit and finish to any in the market. The Wintroop

POCKET FOLDING

BEDSTEAD.

Simple and Durable in its Construction, As Easily Managed as a Parlor Stove; Large Resting Surface, Entirely Free from Dust and Dust, Does not near the Cellar.

Manufactured by DIGHTON FURNACE CO.

In the construction of the Wintroop Hot Air Furnace it has been made a study to avoid the difficulties and annoyances too often found in Furnaces, Pipes warm and free from gas and dust, is the result desired to be sought. Without enlarging upon the important matter of warming and ventilating houses, about which so much has been written of late, we desire to call your attention to the New Wrought Iron Wintroop Heater, as possessing the requisites for a healthful and economical appearance.

Who has and has not the Wintroop, is made of heavy cast iron; the fire pot lined with brick, so that the contents of cold air at bottom is from the base does not come in contact with red hot plate, destroying its vitality, but is delivered into the hot air chamber pure and healthful.

The Radiator is made of the best Wrought Iron, as thoroughly free 20 as a steam boiler, making the escape of gas and dust an impossibility; thus securing what cannot be guaranteed by any Cast Iron Furnace, with its many lines and joints, a healthful atmosphere.

The revertable fire is hidden the even distribution of heat over the whole furnace, leaving no part useless, thus making it the most powerful heater in the market. Another distinguishing feature of the Wintroop is the ease with which the fire can be cleaned out. This has been a serious difficulty with most furnaces, but has been entirely overcome in the Wintroop. Its accommodation of coal and a box in the front, can be thoroughly observed in a few minutes. The Wintroop has been thoroughly tested, and we invite all in want of a superior heating apparatus to an examination of its merits.

The Brooklyn Scandal!

REVIEWED MOULTON!

HIS LATEST STATEMENTS!

[illegible] TO HEAR FROM MOULTON

NEW YORK, Aug 17 There is a lull in [illegible] Tilton scandal Everybody is [illegible] to hear from Moulton Tilton tells [illegible] that Moulton's full statement, [illegible] published, will prove his case, and of [illegible] Beecher's defence On the [illegible] hand, there are said to be plenty of witnesses, some of whom have testified before the Committee to prove that both Tilton and Moulton have repeatedly declared that there was

NO TRUTH IN THE SCANDAL

[illegible] to be published by the Woodhulls, which is substantially the same as now published by Tilton, and that both Beecher and Tilton were entirely guiltless of any [illegible]

[illegible] OPPOSITION TO TILTON'S LETTER TO DR BACON

[illegible] on the best authority that Mr. Moulton is vehemently opposed the raking up [illegible] by Tilton in the publication of [illegible] letter to Dr Bacon, going so far as to [illegible] Tilton from ever after from his [illegible] house Tilton however, refused [illegible] Moulton's wishes, though he did [illegible] to alter the letter so to [illegible] the charge against Beecher stated as first written in the letter.

[illegible] INTERVIEW WITH MOULTON

[illegible] Aug 17 The Brooklyn Argus [illegible]

[illegible] Ipswich, Mass, Aug 17

[illegible] Moulton was last spoken of as [illegible] he boarded the train [illegible] morning He is on a business trip and goes to Portland, Me. [illegible] the information gathered [illegible] was in fact flown—Moulton [illegible] no business engagements [illegible] nature with commercial [illegible] He will return to Brooklyn [illegible] he is completed, and not [illegible] he says he can give no [illegible] probable time of his return

HIS STATEMENT SERVES HIM [illegible]

[illegible] has digested Beecher's statement to the black mailing charge, [illegible] it, and, speaking on this [illegible] with great emphasis there is no [illegible] about it Everything in connection [illegible] matters in the case can be [illegible] at least only to everybody. Moulton [illegible] his course has been an en[illegible] one, and he proposes it shall [illegible] the end His attention was [illegible] Beecher's cross-examination [illegible] he (Moulton) is represented [illegible] Lady Montague, where [illegible] he would not carve a cabbage [illegible] stealing it from behind and [illegible] When this was read Moulton [illegible] said "I will reply to that by [illegible] the criticism of his (Beecher's) [illegible] leaving the truth without guilt.

HIS FUTURE COURSE.

[illegible] decided upon my future course, and [illegible] adhere to the plan I have adopted [illegible] that plan is no human being but [illegible] knows. This has been a very difficult [illegible] to manage up to the present [illegible] the difficulty is now all over [illegible] maintains that he has not a single [illegible] in his possession belonging to [illegible] that has reference to this case With [illegible] to making public any future state[illegible] he adheres to his determination as set [illegible] in his statement to the investigating committee on Monday last but adds that any charges affecting his honor will call from him such an explanation as will effectually [illegible] any doubt anybody might seek to attach to his name

—Hon. Columbus Delano, Secretary of the Interior, and wife, and Wm. C. Merrill, Esq., Treasurer of the Chattanooga & Atlanta Railroad, have been making a brief visit at Senator Hamlin's. They started yesterday for a trip to Mount Desert and Dix Island.

—A proposition for building a steam-mill is being entertained by the people of Patisfield, who subscribe about $12,000 to erect a suitable building. The men who are to work the mill pay six per cent. for the use of the building and bring their machinery from abroad —Officer Frank Pratt cut his left hand quite severe yesterday breaking glass to get at the fire this morning, and aided by Mr. George Lamid and another gentleman, whose name we did not learn, kept the flames down by the brisk use of buckets of water until the engines came.

—M. Schwartz, Esq, has purchased a half interest in the Leach Vessel Gauge and will immediately begin manufacturing the instruments at his machine shop on Harlow street. The gauge indicates on a dial the amount of water in the hold of a vessel, and rings an alarm when it has reached a certain height.

—The concert given by the Bangor Cornet Band on the balcony of the Franklin House last evening, was listened to and enjoyed by an immense crowd, as usual. At the conclusion of the concert Mr. Davis, proprietor of the hotel, gave the Band an excellent supper.

—Kenduskeag bridge is to be repaired with wood, as the job will take only about three weeks, whereas if rebuilt with stone it could not be open to travel until some time in November. The wood work will cost some $3600 and will last about ten years; if rebuilt with stone the cost would be about $18,000.

BOY DROWNED. Saturday afternoon a little boy named Charlie McKinnon, five years of age, son of Mr. Alexander McKinnon, residing on Hancock-st, was playing with a young companion in a boat under the draw of the toll bridge, when he lost his balance and fell overboard. An alarm was given, but the little fellow had sunk to rise no more alive. His body was recovered by Mr. Amos F. Colson about an hour after the accident.

TEMPERANCE CAMP-MEETING. The New England Association of Reformed Men are making preparations to hold a grand temperance camp-meeting on the camp ground at Old Orchard Beach, to commence on Sept. 8th and continue a week. This will be the first temperance camp-meeting ever held in the country It is expected that John B. Gough and other eminent leaders and speakers in the temperance cause, will be present and participate in the exercises.

THE RACE TO-MORROW. If the weather is good the match race for $1100, between Anodyne (formerly Honest Bill) the trotter, and Young Hero, the pacer, which comes off on the Bangor Trotting Park to-morrow, will attract a big crowd. Both horses are well known to be very fast, and much interest is felt by horsemen in the coming contest between them. Some have expressed a doubt that the race would occur, but we are informed by Mr. Leighton, proprietor of the Park, that it will positively come off, as another $100 has been added to the sum originally put up to be trotted for.

FIRE ON WASHINGTON STREET. About half-past one o'clock this morning fire was discovered in D. Andrews' car shop, on Washington street, opposite the European and North American Railway offices, and an alarm was given which brought out the Fire Department in quick order. The flames were soon extinguished by the deluge of water thrown into the shop. Mr. Andrews had about $300 worth of cars and stock in the building, but it was not all destroyed. He had no insurance. The fire originated in the back shop, but how, unless it was purposely set, no one knows. The building was damaged to the extent of $25 or $30.

FIRE IN LEVANT. About seven o'clock yesterday morning, the large barn on the town farm in Levant was discovered to be on fire, and so rapid was the progress of the flames that it was impossible to check them or to save anything from the building, which was consumed with all the contents, including some forty tons of hay and a valuable yoke of oxen. From the barn the fire was communicated to the house, which, with the ell connected, was also destroyed, but the furniture, bedding and household goods were saved. The loss is estimated at $3,000, on which there was no insurance of $1,000. The fire is supposed to have been incendiary.

GOLDEN WEDDING. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Adams celebrated last evening the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding, and a large party of relatives and friends gathered at their residence on York street to congratulate them on the happy event. [illegible] their abundance, bright hues and delicate perfume made the apartments seem almost like trop cal bowers, and upon the arch between the parlors were conspicuously displayed the dates, "1824—1874," encircled by a wreath. Among the guests were a sister of Mr. Adams and her husband, who celebrated their own golden wedding seven years ago. The presents made to Mr. and Mrs. Adams were many in number and valuable, embracing gold and silver ware, furniture, articles of utility and beauty, etc. The occasion was much enjoyed by all present.

YOUNG MEN'S CRUSADE CLUB. The meeting of the Young Men's Crusade Club in Concert Hall, last evening, was well attended. President Lord presided, and the meeting was opened by prayer by Mr. Oliver, after which the temperance hymn, "Sound the Battle Cry," was sung. The question, "Is it expedient for the temperance men of Bangor to unite in the formation of a political temperance party?" was discussed by Messrs. Patterson, Hill, Doughty, Hubbard, Dunham, Patten and Dunton, and Mrs. Crossman, of this city; and Mr. Hunter, of Brewer. When the question came to a vote (the ladies present exercising the "right of suffrage"), there was a large majority in the affirmative. The meeting was closed by singing the temperance song, "Save the Drunkard."

ARRESTED FOR SWINDLING Charles E. Lord, who will be remembered as the man who attempted to start a newspaper in this city in 1870, was arrested in Boston Saturday, for swindling by advertising for help, requiring a cash deposit from applicants for the situations he offered, as a guarantee of their honesty, and leaving with the money. He has been travelling under the names of A. W. Lamont, H. A. Ward, and various other cognomens. When arrested he was looking over thirty-two letters he had received in reply to his advertisements, most of them stating that the writers had various sums to loan him and that they were out of work. The police have a number of cases against him—one for swindling a Rhode Island man out of $50 in January last, one for stealing $150 worth of clothing and jewelry from a boarding house in Boston, one for never returning or paying for a panorama he leased of Lewiston parties, three cases at the West End, and a number in other localities, where he stepped out without paying his board.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUSES.

Caucuses were held in the several wards of this city last evening at 7½ o'clock, and the following delegates were chosen to attend the Republican County Convention which is to be held here on Thursday next.—

Ward 1—T. G. Stickney, Frank D. Pullen, George W. Smith

Ward 2—James C. Weston, A. L. Simpson, J. C. Thorndike.

SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT.

AUGUST (CRIMINAL) TERM

HON JOHN A. PETERS, Justice Presiding.
EZRA C. DARTT, Esq, Clerk.
JASPER HUTCHINGS, Esq, County Att'y.

Monday, Aug. 17th. The Grand Jury, having completed their labors, came in about 6 P. M., and reported twenty-five indictments. Among the persons now in jail, against whom indictments were found, who were arraigned, were the following:

Amos Collins; one indictment for larceny and one for larceny from a store in the night time; plea, not guilty.

Albert B. Neville; larceny of team; made no plea, asking for more time.

Emily Clark; larceny; plea, not guilty.

Peter Tandy; adultery; plea, not guilty.

Adeline Tarrio; adultery; plea, not guilty

George V. Lancaster; larceny; plea, not guilty.

William Maybee; assault and battery; plea, not guilty.

John D. Downs; liquor nuisance; plea, guilty.

The Grand Jury certified that they failed to find an indictment against James F. Davis, arraigned and committed for the murder of his father, Silas Davis, in Stetson, because of his insanity.

Besides the indictments found, there are some forty or fifty appealed cases to be tried this term.

The Grand Jury before separating unanimously passed the following:

Whereas, The Grand Jury of the Supreme Judicial Court of the State of Maine, holden in Bangor in and for the County of Penobscot, for the year of our Lord 1874, are now about to be discharged from further duty; and whereas said jurors have performed their duties in an amicable manner towards each other; and whereas the Foreman of said Jury has been very lenient towards us who have been under his charge—

Therefore, We, the members of said Jury, would tender to said Foreman our kind regards [illegible] Foreman [illegible] Jury [illegible] Hon. John A. Peters, Justice [illegible] Ezra C. I call to the brim, and speak the name,
Of Heliodora—let the same
Sweet word be uttered or echoed or,
With every drop that shall drop down pour
Out, give it to the gentle breeze
Like incense and let the incline trees,
Repeat the sound till every one
To soft melodious name shall hear.

Bring me the garland—faded wreath
Still fragrant in its lingering breath
Tis one that Heliodora twined
Last eve her beauteous brow to bind,
Lovely, even now with these drooping flowers,
All elegant or van shed hours

Oh mark the Rose—glistening tear
That flows for a love no longer here
The tender tint so red and lone,
Reveal a my Heliodora gone

MRS VAUGHAN'S SISTER

CHAPTER I

A low vaulted room, in a quiet house, in a quiet country town near the borders of South Wales. A bird singing cheerily in a wicker cage. A heap of soft, white, womanly work on the polished centre table, a little cottage piano, open and covered with music—English, German and Italian. A huge walnut tree rustling ruddily frank against the blue summer sky and flushing its broad wrinkled leaves, like kind y hands in at the open window with its latticed panes, wide cushioned seat, and cosy chintz curtains. On a seat in it sat a tall, handsome, and dressed in the semi bridal mourning widows affect now a days, holding a newspaper in her hand as she stood out of the window. Crouched upon the floor sobbing piteously, with face of ashen hue in the shadow, white arms crossed over the window seat, a girl with long fair hair and a slender, childish figure.

That is my scene. Not much in it, is there?

"Edith," said the elder lady at last though her eyes were still bent on the green trellis of trellis work as she spoke, "it is foolish to take it in that way I thought you had more spirit, I did indeed

There was no answer—nothing but the long, passionate sobs, and she spoke again, rather uncomfortably this time

"I am half sorry I showed it to you, but I did think you would have cared so much And really to go to believing in a man who has forgotten all about you, and I don't be lieve you really loved him

"Oh Aunt, don't" broke in a childish, imploring voice, half strangled with sobs, "I cannot bear it Oh! I cannot, cannot bear it

And the strength of it sank lower yet behind the tightly interlaced fingers which supported it

"My dearest Edith! Such want of dignity! I know it was very sad, of course, and I am exceedingly sorry—couldn't be more sorry I feel disappointed to myself But you ought to try and bear up You would not like all the circumstances hereafter to know you are breaking your heart for a man who never cared for you

It is, you must say that

The head was lifted for a moment, disclosing a face wonderously fair and pretty, even though the large innocent eyes, blue as forget-me-nots, were dripping with fast falling tears, and the lips, which had been so pallid in the moonlight, cheeks and parted lips, and Mrs Vaughan's own handsome face contrasted as she passed her hand mutely over the crumpled yellow tiles.

"Do I say that, Fred?" the girl repeated, feebly "I am half sure hat any thing else while I think he loved me once And he did, I know he did. Oh, Jack, Jack! how could you

Her face was hidden again, and Mrs Vaughan said, softly—

"My dear child, now that changes so soon isn't worth having Now, do—do be calm Your forehead is burning, and your hands like mine Edith, you must not go on like this Hush! again! the girl said, hoarsely. "I can't believe it yet. Read it, every word

And Mrs Vaughan took up the paper and read aloud—

"Married, on the 14th inst, at the chapel of the regiment Fort Wallace, Atlantic Me Elgin, to Jane, eldest daughter of Major Philip Dundas, of Fort Mars, Dundas, and to Bridge's Island, London

"Dona dear, the banker, of course, added Mrs Vaughan, musingly "Enormously rich people The girl must be an heiress"

Edith Vaughan had sunk back in a sitting position on the floor, her eyes wide and wide When Mrs Vaughan finished, she held out her hand, saying in a strange, stiff voice—

"Give me I—I can't understand

"I will take it with you, Mrs Vaughan said, rising and laying the paper down on the window seat You will be better alone for a little while, I dare say and I will call you when tea is ready Try and cheer up, Edith It would have been a very poor match for you

Unreasonable, childish grief soon quiet themselves, the window said to herself, as she went away, as far the door behind her, and she was right When, a couple of hours later she returned to the room, Edith's grief was quite quiet, the tears, the long, as dead hunt on the floor, the newspaper still crumpled in her small soft hand

Edith and Mrs Vaughan were sisters-in-law the latter having married Garrett Vaughan, the girls elder brother, half dozen years back, but her husband was dead now, and Edith, who had lived with him since her parents death, continued to live on with his widow and, indeed, being a very gentle, clinging sort of little girl, would as soon thought of flying as wishing to separate herself from those of the bright, handsome woman of the world, who treated her with the protecting, if somewhat patronizing kindness of an elder sister, and let her have quite as much of her own way as pretty Edith ever cared to be spoiled for her pains. Mrs Vaughan was quietly fond of the stately Beatrice, admired her intensely confided in her as she would in her mother and was quite content to pin herself in the under Mrs Vaughan's kind sway provided no husband appeared to take her off into his own home

Date, however, had already produced a candidate for that position in a certain Jack Walters captain in the 3d Foot

He had known Beatrice Vaughan before her marriage, when she was a gay, young lady indeed, and he a beardless ensign, and in those days there had been talk of a flirtation between the dark-eyed Miss Trafalgar and gay Jack Walters. But it had no or nothing in the end, Beatrice making a much better match by marrying young Doctor Vaughan the fashionable physician in Northfield-on-Sea, and Jack Walters being consoled (if he needed consolation) by an introduction from his chief that the regiment was ordered to Ireland, and he must pack up his traps and make ready to accompany it on that day week.

It happened, however, that in the first year of her widowhood, that tidings reached Mrs Vaughan of the 3d being quartered within a mile or so of St. Cuthbold-on-Sea, and as might be supposed, Lieut. Walters was not long in renewing his acquaintance with the fair relict, being received by that lady with all the warmth and cordiality due to a friend of such old standing. I should people even said that if Mrs. Vaughan's bereavement were not so recent, Lieutenant Walters stood a very fair chance of stepping into the doctor's vacant shoes, but of course I need not say there were no grounds for this gossip, and, if ever Jack Walters had cared for his gracious hostess, the fancy had long since died out for his name had been high in the list of beauty worshippers ever since, and it soon became apparent to the most censorious that the charm which attracted him to that old-fashioned house, standing back in its quaint, flagged court-yard from the busy high street, was not its tall and table-clad mistress, but the slender, little blue-eyed girl, with the gentle voice and winning smile, who made so innocently fair a contrast to her magnificent sister.

And Edith? Well, how could Edith help loving any one so universally charming, so bright, handsome, and light hearted as Jack Walters? especially when Beatrice praised him so highly, and gave him such a hearty welcome that he soon became a more frequent visitor than any other of their male acquaintance—always, very rare acquaintances in country town? It was so easy to Edith to love those about her, that it was little wonder if Jack Walters soon made himself master of the tender little heart, so fresh and unstained in its virginal simplicity; but when, one day, Mrs Vaughan being out, he took an opportunity of telling Edith that she had won him so entirely that he could have no rest or happiness till she had promised to be his wife the little girl could hardly believe him; and raised a pair of such wonderful forget-me-not eyes to her tall lover's face that he almost smiled.

"Me!" she repeated, drawing back her body a little, but lacking courage or inclination—he hoped it was the latter—to remove her hand from his strong, close grasp. "You can't mean it, surely?"

"The same" laughed the young officer, taking advantage of the girl's bewilderment to draw her nearer to him. "Is it strange that any one should love you, Edith, or is it that you cannot love me that you look so surprised?"

He fancied the pointed fingers closed a little over him at the second query; but the eyes were hidden under their long lashes, and only a bright rose flush in the soft cheeks made answer when he was silent.

"Edith, tell me," said Jack Walters; and his voice and touch were very tender as he put one finger under the dimpled chin, and tried to raise her drooping face. "Could you love me enough to be my wife? I know I'm not half worthy of you; but oh! little one, I do love you so dearly. Don't you think you could? Edith, answer me."

Whereupon the sweet eyes were suddenly raised with a quick, guileless look of most undoubting affection, and Edith answered promptly—

"Jack, you know I love you, and you are a great deal too good for me."

It was a most undignified speech, of course, but "que voulez vous?" Edith Vaughan had never been through a single London season, achieved the most innocent flirtations. What wonder if she were rather backward in feminine coquetries?

Mrs. Vaughan received the news as soon as ever she came in. Jack was gone by then, and Edith rushed straight to her sister-in-law, and making a gilt necklace of her pretty little arms for that lady's neck poured out the story of her wonderful joy and happiness, expecting very naturally, an answering outburst of sympathy. This, the did not get, however Mrs Vaughan was very much surprised, so much so, indeed, that she turn ed quite white and queer, and seemed to chide for some minutes that Edith must be under a delusion—persisting, even when convinced of the truth of her sister's story, in accusing Lieutenant Walters of being "only in play" After which she declared angrily that if she had suspected he would abuse her hospitality by making love to "that child" she would never have encouraged his visits, and considerably damped the spirits of the "child" in question, by being very cross and invalidish for the rest of the day.

The Official Report (N. Y.) shows that the ratio of the number of policies upon which claims were paid in all companies has advanced from 10.8 per thousand in 1872, to 11.1 in 1873, while the former year the American Popular lost 6.7, and in the latter 3.7 per thousand.

The rate of death claims and of expenses to total income, and to total amount at risk, increasing rather than diminishing in the case of the aggregate companies, being in both years very large, contrast strongly with the low rate of this Company and its growing prosperity. In the light of these facts, its low premium rates are more than justified in a practical sense, as, in a scientific view, they are both equitable and secure.

Before the era of inflation in life insurance, the old-line companies are shown by the reports to have done a comparatively small business, and it was doubtless, with the large premiums they required, comparatively safe. Some, commencing later, "pushed business" from the first, with a vehemence that created amazement and alarm, in contrast with the older companies, are beginning to experience the reaction that must have been expected from the abnormal and rapid increase inflation.

The comparatively small (but really large for the kind) number of policies issued by this Company in one of the best evidences of its security—the rigid adherence to well established scientific principles, in the rating of risks, giving low premiums only to superior lives, and thus making the Company attractive to few others. It would surprise those not acquainted with the working of our plan, to know the number of applications received and the amount of labor and care expended in their examination and rating; all of which is just so much to the advantage of superior risks

It will also be noticed that large business is not a guarantee of safety, for if the mortality is high, indicating a want of care or skill in selection, the larger the business, the more safety is imperiled, and while small business may not show care, large business does show carelessness. We could have shown a very large business from the start if we had been indifferent to the kind. But the kind is the question, and none work is unsound, for the amount of our kind of business than would do four times as much that would be unprofitable to both the assured and to the Company.

The increase of our business during the past year, is as wholesome and encouraging as our losses are small.

Our ratio of increase has been

In number of Policies,	105.78
In amount of Assurance,	116.44
